

Although there are many sources that anyone can find on individual techniques, there isn't one that lists many at once in a practical way.

A compiled list of baking techniques haven't been documented in a single site.

Bakers may encounter this problem whenever they see a recipe that calls for one technique but another that does not and wonder "Why wouldn't they do this?" or "What would doing this technique do to this recipe?"

Some examples would be dissolving the baking soda by hot water and browning the butter.